

twentyfivefortyfive news & notes

boardbanter

Welcome to twentyfivefortyfive's eNews update. We'll be sending these out whenever we have activities planned and news that you may find interesting.

One item that we want to mention here is that sponsorships for the upcoming springpartyafterparty are available. HoCoMoJo has graciously stepped up as the event's signature sponsor. We would be grateful if you could help us find additional sponsors as well. It's a great help to our initiative, and it provides exposure for a price that can't be beat ($100).

If you can help us secure sponsors, or if you have thoughts or questions about twentyfivefortyfive, please let us know. We'd love to hear from you.

Be well,
Candace Dodson Reed and Joshua Feldmark

Thanks to everyone who came to our February event at Ram's Head Tavern! Special thanks go to Ananta Hejeebu for his work on behalf of the Salvation Army in Howard County and for serving as our guest speaker. Additional thanks go to Meg Moon and Chris Maynard for organizing a great evening.

Also, thank you to all who came out to Grassroots for the facility tour and the evening of service. Being able to serve a meal to our neighbors who were staying at Grassroots because of displacement or crisis was incredibly rewarding for all who participated.

Facebook Co-Founder Starts Philanthropic Social-Networking Site
By Nicole Wallace

One of the whiz kids behind Facebook is turning his attention to the nonprofit world.

Chris Hughes co-founded the social-networking giant with two roommates as a Harvard undergraduate, and later served as director of online organizing for Barack Obama's 2008 presidential campaign.

Today Mr. Hughes, now 26, announced that his next project will be Jumo, a new social network set to start in the fall that will help people find causes and nonprofit organizations that they care about. MORE
